New Interface, New Features

Following last year's major overhaul of the Library of Latin Texts and related databases, Sources Chrétiennes Online now also benefits from a fully renewed interface. While the underlying data structure remains unchanged, the research experience has been significantly enhanced: smarter search tools, richer metadata exploration, improved filtering, and new vocabulary analytics make navigating SCO faster and more intuitive than ever.

Searching and filtering

You can search for a term or phrase in the original text (first box) or translation (second box), or query both at the same time to find where the term has been translated in a specific way.

Persons and their features

Learn more about the person. When were they active? Which works are attributed or otherwise linked to them? Which other persons are associated with them? In which online resources can we discover more about them?

Works and their features

Learn more about a work and how it can be contextualized: its author and other related persons, its date of composition, its genre, its topic, and its area of origin. Find out more about the work in the Sources Chrétiennes volume and in various reference works.

Volumes and their contents

Use the "Volumes" tab to browse through the volumes published over the years in the Sources Chrétiennes series and discover which works were published in each volume.

Reference works

Focus on a specific reference work (CPG, CPL, BHG, or BHL) to get a domain-specific overview of (e.g. hagiographical) texts.

Database statistics

Using the "More > Statistics" tab, you can browse through the more than 30 million words (original + translation) available in SCO and focus on specific lexical items you are interested in.
